Millennial nurse education: utilizing innovative approaches to improve teaching strategies

Alice Charitable and Patricia Charitable
Duquesne University, USA

There are a new generation of nurses that are entering the workforce, affectionately called the millennial nurses. This goal-driven unique group will require a complete transformation in nursing education. As healthcare becomes technologically advanced, the use of technology and other innovative approaches in nursing education will also become more prevalent. In this presentation, we will discuss how to faculty can promote understanding and the academic success of this generation? We will also discuss key components of transforming nursing education to become more digital and collaborative.
