Practical application of energy healing to pain management

Gloria Kaye

Energy Healing Institute, USA

Energy healing is an ancient phenomenon that can be traced back to Biblical times. The recent interest in energy healing and alternative medicine is growing, and more and more medical schools are including energy medicine in their curriculums. Dr. Kaye has taught her techniques to first year medical students and has been conducting healing sessions for over 50 years. Using infrared technology, a physicist could capture images of energy and heat being transferred from her hands to her clients. In her presentation, students will learn the practical application of energy healing to a variety of medical conditions including acute and chronic pain because of injuries or trauma. Working energetically, students will learn how to positively affect pain levels. As the energy is transmitted, cells may respond in one of three or more of the following ways: Dispersal – unwanted cells may be dispersed. The intervention lends itself to numerous conditions such as: dispersal of arthritis, adhesions, infections, and bone spurs. Reorganization– traumas and injuries are frequently reduced as skeletal changes create physical balance. Pain associated with physical imbalances may be resolved. Regeneration – as new cells are regenerated, wounds, incisions, open sores and infections can frequently be affected. This is an exciting, interactive presentation where participants will come away with informative, practical techniques for dealing with pain.
